

FY16 Sending District Tuition Payments to Commonwealth Charter Schools – Updated

This chart presents updated preliminary DESE estimates of how much money each of the listed school districts will lose to one or more Commonwealth charter schools in the current school year – fiscal year 2016. This total reflects the amount of Chapter 70 aid that will be diverted from the school district to one or more charter schools, minus the total amount of state reimbursement the district is estimated to receive. (If a district is not listed, it is not currently sending any students to Commonwealth charter schools.) Final data for FY16 should be posted in June, and will take into account state first-year payments for students formerly home-schooled or in private schools, for which information is not yet available from DESE.

The sending district reimbursement state budget line item has been underfunded thus far in FY16 (and was underfunded in FY15). Therefore, the chart also shows each district's reimbursement shortfall resulting from the underfunding.

For a more detailed spreadsheet that includes data on district enrollment, charter enrollment and the percentage of a district's budget that is allocated to charter schools, go to massteacher.org/charterdata.

Share this information on social media and in conversations you have in your communities; let people know what your school district could do with the money that is instead being spent on privately operated charter schools, or what has been cut since charter schools began siphoning funds from your district.
